They are of a much higher and broader significance; they indicate the arousing of the people of New York to the great issues that are now submitted in a peculiar sense to their arbitrament, Of these issues it would be hardly becoming in me

At Westfield, the last station in New York at which the train stopped, the people had assembled in large numbers, many ladies being present on foot and in carriages. Mr. Blaine, on being introduced, was greeted with three cheers and a tiger. He spoke only a few words.

There was a fine demonstration at Erie before the train arrived at the station. As it was passing the Erie City Boiler Works the workmen ran out and cheered. At the station there were also about 3,600 people. The Republican candidate was introduced by Mr. J. T. Downing, of Erie, and spoke as follows:

"Although it is thirty years since I was a citizen of Pennsylvania there is no spot on earth where I feel more at home. The associations of my childhood and of my young manhood and all that I cherished in early life are identified with Pennsylvania, and I always return to her with a feeting of affection which is not lessened but deepened by my long absence. I therefore feel to-day in your kind reception that I am met by brethren, by triends: indeed, I might say by kinsmen, because I hardly conceive it possible to assemble as large a number of Pennsylvanians anywhere upon the soil of the State without including some one of them with whom I am either nearly or remotely connected. With all my attachment to the honored State of my residence, in which I have spent nearly all the years of my adult life, I have lost nothing of my love for old Pennsylvania. I thank you sincerely for this demonstration of friendly regard, and love for old Pennsylvania. I thank you sincerely for this demonstration of friendly regard, and with the haste of a traveler on an express train,

I bid you good-by."

Ladies and gentlemen, I count it a matter of good fortune, as it is certainly a source of gratification to myself, that I enter the State of Ohio through the old county of Ashtabula. I have never via fed this county but with a warr Ohio through the old county of Ashtabula. I have never vis ted this county but with a warm welcome, to which you to-day add another. I thank you sincerely and bid you good-by."

At Ashtabula there was another large and enthusiastic crowd. Mr. Biaine had to leave the train and mount a platform, where all the people could see him. In response to a brief speech welcoming him, Mr. Blaine said:

"I have already said upon the border of your State that to me it is a peculiar granification that State that to me it is a peculiar gratification that I enter Ohio through the county of Ashrabula. In our political divisions we look to States, and ordinarily the county is undistinguished beyond the limits of the State of which it is a part. But there are a few counties in the Union—like St. Lawrence in New York, Lancaster in Pennsylvania, and Ashtabula in Ohio—that by the intensity of their convictions and the force of their action, have borne themselves to the front so far that they become political units in the contests of the nation, and if you are the state of Maine with the full aid and consent of James G. Blains were still in force to day, no foreign-born citizen would have a vote to cast for him. This enlightened Republican State of Maine has for many years prohibited, and does to-day prohibit, the sale of ale, porter, In the contests of the nation, and if you get their temper stirred and their energies called forth the consequence has generally been that the party which has defied them has been crushed in the conflict. I think it a hopeful and encouraging sign that in the year 1884 the young men of the United States, more than at any time I have known, are taking an active and preminent part in the national contest. I augur from it good results. Again I tender you my thanks for the very kind reception you have given me, and bid you good-night."

Some of the clubs taking part in the parade came from places seventy miles distant. Gen. Logan spoke briefly at one of the stands, and speeches were made by several other gentlemen. After the review Mr. Blaine and his son, Walker Blaine, went to the house of Mrs. Garfield, whose guests they were during Saturday and Sunday.

On Saturday, Mr. Blaine, accompanied by Gov. Foster, Senator Plumb, and other Republican leaders, went to Elyria, where a political meeting was in progress, and made a short speech. In the evening he returned to Cleveland and spent the night at the residence of Mrs. Garfield, It was his intention to have visited the tomb of the late President Garfield on Sunday, but it rained all day, and the candidate remained in-doors.

GERMAN DEMOCRATS.

They Hold a Great Mass-Meeting in New York City.

[Associated Press report.]

The Academy of Music was crowded to-night, as were the streets in the vicinity, on the occasion of the German Democratic mass-meeting. The interior of the building was handsomely decorated and there was a considerable display of fireworks. Gen. Franz Sigel called the meeting to order. Among the Vice-Presidents were George Ebert, Henry Clausen, Jr., Philip Ebling. John Eichler, Peter Doelger, Henry Bischoff, Jr., and David G. Ynengling, all brewers. Gen. Franz Sigel, in his opening speech, said:

"We don't believe in prohibition. We want a Democratic republic. We want to join the ranks of the party which ousted the Tweedring and opposes other rings of the same kind. We want a thorough weeding out of all corrupt officeholders. May the victorious Democratic party, with its giorious allies, act from this standpoint."

Oswald Ottendorfer, editor of the Staats Zeitung, was chosen President of the meeting and was received with cheers. Every mention by Ottendorfer of the names of Cieveland and Hendricks was greeted with cheers. Otten-dorfer closed his speech by saying of Cieveland: "You have a man as plain as he is unpretending; a man who hesitates not a moment to show to the door the friends of corruption and demazogues; a man who cannot be induced to leave the path which sound common sense has shown him to be the right one. For these reasons he has repelled the worst elements in his shown him to be the right one. For these reasons he has repelled the worst elements in his party, while Blaine has attracted them. Le is a man perfectly unmoved by the hue and cry raised by Butler and Grady and the rabble generally. Hence it was that the declaration in the chicago convention by Gen. Bragg, of Wisconsin, was applauded to the eeho when he said: We love Cleveland most on account of the enemies he has made. To this great truth is only to be added: 'And we oppose Blaine most strenuously on account of the friends he has made.'

Ex-Gov. Salomon, of Wisconsin, reviewed the Mulligan letters, and said he believed Blaine to be thoroughly corrupt and unworty of the votes or confidence of the people of this country.

Joseph Pulitzer, editor of the New York World, in the course of his speech, said:

"The history of the State of Maine is ample proof of what Blaine represents. Why, if the laws passed in Maine with the full aid and consent of James G. Blaine were still in force today, no foreign-born citizen would have a vote lager beer, and other malt liquors, wise and clder, as well as all distilled spirits, making it a criminal offense, punishable by both fine and imprisonment. I hold that prohibition can have no place in any system of government based upon the will of the people and the free consent of the governed. We are guaranteed the in-alienable rights to life, liberty, and the pursuit and with a precious memory of the friendships I have enjoyed with its public men. I thank you heartily for this kind reception and betake of happiness. Prohibition is repugnant to every idea of popular self-government and American freedom. It is emphatically unconstitutional, revolutionary, and void, destructive, and subversive of the very foundations of a true republic, and fraught with danger to its existence."

Resolutions in the spirit of the speeches were adopted. The preamble said:

"James G. Blaine is one of the most fanatical champions of the most narrow-minded temperance compalsion, and of the political disfranchisement of adopted citizens."

Mayor Edson also sent regrets. Before the meeting adjourned Carl Schurz appeared on the platform. His appearance was the signal for the most enthusiastic and prolonged outburst of applause that has been heard in this city during this campaigm. The audience simply went half wild, and shouted and cheered for over three minutes. At length Schurz, after having been called to the foot-lights, was permitted to say he was weary after his extended trip through the West. He told his hearers he had met with the kindest reception all through the West, and that everywhere he had found great enthusiasm for the Democratic ticket.

"We believed that the nomination of Grover Cleveland was an unwise one. We opposed his nomination at Chicago. I am not going to criticise his qualifications. The community has, done that already, and it would be improper for me to hold up Mr. Cleveland as a man whom I believed was incapable and unfitted, and say his nomination was not in accordance with the rules of Democratic conventions. If the criticisms that have been passed upon him by individuals and by the press are in part correct, let me remind you that equally strong criticisms have been passed by the tress and individuals upon Mr. Blaine. We shall support Grover Cleveland in good faith. Nothing shall be left undone on the part of the organization to induce the men who were formerly adherents to believe that the grievances of which they complain cannot possibly be remedied by the election of Mr. Blaine. Let our labors be unceasing till the sun goes down on election day. Let us forget the past. Let us, if we have the influence, persuade our friends to return to their first love—the Democratic party."

Mr. Kelly was not misunderstood. He was
